DISCUSS RAVAGES OF EUROPEAN WAR

Conference of Catholic Charities Considers "Value of Future Man and Woman."

SEE NATIONS PLANNING TO MEET GRAVE PROBLEMS

Arguments For and Against Minimum Wage Principle—Legislation for Women Urged.

The value of the man and woman of the future, on account of the depopulation of the world by the great war, was a theme coupled with discussions of the minimum wage question at today's sessions of the fourth biennial National Conference of Catholic Charities, which closes its sessions at McMahon Hall, Catholic University, tomorrow.

The topic first mentioned, relating to war's ravages, brought out by John Rea of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of Philadelphia, in the sectional meeting of the committee on families this morning, was supplemented by a lively discussion by the committee on social and civic activities. In this latter meeting Benedict Elder of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of Louisville gave arguments for the minimum wage as a present for war, and the speaker of the future, when it will necessarily be put into effect. Edward F. Mcweeney of Boston gave arguments against the minimum wage, in the discussion which followed the consensus of opinion seemed favorable to the minimum wage.

Confronted by Pressing Problems.

There never was a period in the history of the world, perhaps, when the Catholic Church and Catholic laity were confronted with problems more pressing and more grave than at the present time," Mr. Rea said. "Every nation in Europe engaged in the greatest of conflicts faces the problem of caring for the millions of orphans, to which carnage makes constant additions."

"Already most of the nations, looking ahead to the close of hostilities, are planning for the maintenance of the home, the sorrowing mother and the helpless child," the speaker continued. "The value of the future man and woman has risen enormously in the eyes of the state because of this depopulation, when the future man and woman will later be required to till the soil, to work in the shops, in store or in counting room, to take the place in the industrial and commercial life of these shattered people in these shattered nations."

All unconsciously, in meeting of the committee on social and civic activities, speakers were arguing the question of whether or not the minimum wage will or will not be the best thing for the young workers of the future generation. Thus, it was pointed out this morning, do conventions sometimes solve problems and work toward great results when on the surface, to the casual observer, no coherent scheme can be seen in the different sectional meetings of a convention.

Urges Legislation for Women.
Mr. Elder, in his argument, for the minimum wage, declared the legislation has worked well in foreign countries and gave figures to support his statements. He dwelt particularly on the necessity for such legislation for women, saying:

"A great many of the women of today work for less than living wages and so undermine their health and efficiency. These women are the mothers of the future and their welfare is the public's welfare. The welfare of the country demands the minimum wage for these women."

Classed as "Sentimentalism," "Such sentimentalism as the minimum wage legislation," was the way Mr. Mcweeney phrased the question, in a paper against the minimum wage principle. He said, in part:

"It is praiseworthy to attempt to improve the condition of mankind. Human wastage should be averted if possible, even if it is at the expense of the use of greed should be protected in every way, but at the same time we can oppose such sentimentalism as the minimum wage legislation and still feel that we are doing more to help the poor than do those who advocate remedies which in practice are worse than the diseases they profess to cure."

Delegates to the convention are sightseeing this afternoon. There are also on today's program meetings of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, followed by a meeting of the Vincentians, a meeting of settlement workers and of nurses. There is to be a general session of the conference at 8 o'clock tonight at McMahon Hall.

Lauds Church Charity Work.
The church as a great instrumentality in charity work was lauded by Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, rector of the Catholic University and chairman of the conference, in an address on what the conference has accomplished in six years before a general session in McMahon Hall last night.

"There is a striking tendency nowadays," said Bishop Shahan, "to oust the church from the field of charity. The modern philanthropists would in-prove man's material conditions, forgetting that he had a soul. It is the aim of the church to put the spirit of religion in work for the poor."

The national conference has been a great source of inspiration to Catholic charity workers, Bishop Shahan said. It had helped to organize Catholic thought and Catholic effort. It had connected the extremes of radicalism and conservatism, its publication had been a source of instruction and guidance.

Interest in Charities Monthly.
General interest attached last night to the report of Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan, professor of political economy at the Catholic University, on the new Catholic Charities Monthly, to be published in the near future at the university under auspices of the conference.

"Through the medium of the proposed periodical, members of the conference have opportunity to meet one another more often than at the two-year meetings. They can thus exchange opinions and express their views on subjects in which they are commonly interested once a month," said Dr. Ryan.

The speaker said the publications of the conference constituted the beginning of a literature of Catholic charities in America. The monthly magazine, the speaker said, will have seven departments: editorial department, department on charitable institutions, the doctrinal department, the department devoted to social movements in general, news and philanthropy, the question department and finally a section occupied by reviews and notices of books and other publications in the field of philanthropy.

WASHINGTON WILL SEND BIG CROWD TO BALTIMORE

Estimated That 8,000 Local Holy Name Members Will Take Part in Parade.

The Holy Name demonstration in Baltimore October 15 will draw an immense throng of paraders and sightseers from Washington, the lowest estimate of the former now being 8,000 men and boys from the thirty parishes taking part.

Reports coming in to the hands of the officers show that each parish is getting out its full quota of men, and working hard to equal the great showing here last October, when Washington had 10,328 in line.

The new rector of St. Aloysius Church, Rev. P. J. Cunniff, predicts that 1,800 paraders will represent his church in line, every one carrying a United States flag. Two large banners of the society also will be displayed.

Initial Appearance of St. Patrick's.
St. Patrick's Church will make its initial appearance in the ranks of the Holy Name Society. Mr. W. T. Russell is lead the largest number the church has ever sent out in any parade.

Holy Trinity, in Georgetown, held a meeting last night, and was addressed by Rev. Edward J. Magrath, S. J., who urged all to make the show of the year and keep Georgetown in the fore ranks of the organization. Addresses also were made by Capt. J. J. Murphy, Thomas J. Stanton and President J. H. Doyle of the Washington branch. The singing of the hymns was led by Frank Kerr.

St. Dominic to Send 500 Men.
St. Dominic's Church, where the Holy Name Society was started forty years ago, will send over nearly 500 men to help Baltimore make the parade a success. This parish, it is claimed, has the best workers in the Holy Name cause in the city, and the parish as a whole is always doing something to foster the work that St. Dominic started in the thirteenth century.

A special meeting of the Holy Name Society of St. Stephen's Church has been called for tomorrow night at the parish house at 8 o'clock. All members have been requested to attend, as preparation for the parade will be made at this meeting.

St. Stephen's has the pledge of 328 men so far who will go, and President Noonan says he is sure that 450 will assemble on the day of parade.

Holy Name Church, under President Lusby, will marshal fully 300, while St. Paul and Sacred Heart will practically take over every male in their parishes over ten years of age.

The mass meeting to be held early in October at the Immaculate Conception Church will be the greatest gathering of Catholic men ever held in Washington, it is claimed. Every prelate of distinction will be there to talk Holy Name affairs, including Bishop Carroll of Baltimore, who is moderator of the Holy Name Union.
